

Walnut Hills is a neighborhood rich in cultural, ethnic, religious and socio-economic diversity

Welcome to the neighborhood! Founded in 1804, Walnut Hills was a key part of the Underground Railroad with resident Harriet Beecher Stowe and the Lane Seminary hosting abolitionist debates. During the first half of the 20th century, Peebles Corner became known as the second downtown because of its vibrant business district and close proximity to downtown Cincinnati.

The neighborhood is home to a broad range of historic, cultural, and civic assets including Eden Park, which contains the Cincinnati Art Museum, Krohn Conservatory, Cincinnati Playhouse in the Park, and Seasongood Pavilion. Bush Recreation Center provides an array of fitness programs and activities for all ages. The Walnut Hills Area Council and the Walnut Hills Business Group offer meaningful opportunities for engagement, and a variety of local businesses, community organizations, social services, schools, faith-based groups, and events round out the neighborhood’s offerings.

Walnut Hills is a warm and welcoming community, and a great place for individuals and families. Whether you’re a long-time resident, renting your first apartment, owning a home, or just here for a short visit, we hope you enjoy your stay.
